Ivory tower? Universities have often been accused of operating in comfortable bubbles immune to and distant from the pressures of “real” life. Well, if you happen to hold this common misapprehension you’ll be immediately disabused of it after a glance at our new five-year strategic plan.

When we began to develop the latest strategic plan, we suspected some serious soul-searching would follow. And it did. Quickly.

Our deliberations soon confirmed that our operating environment had shifted dramatically since we crafted our previous five-year plan.

THE PRESSURES
Consider a few of the powerful social forces currently re-shaping higher education and UNIBusiness:

• Learning practices are changing in this digital and social media environment where competition for student attention is growing all the time and in unpredictable new ways.

• Increasing financial and competitive pressures influence who funds and delivers higher education and how that delivery is achieved.

• Quality and rigor, longstanding UNIBusiness hallmarks, are being challenged as prospective student and parent preferences appear to be shifting to cost and employability.

THE PRINCIPLES
While the picture that emerged from our review was daunting, some very good news was also evident. Our analysis clearly indicated, and our stakeholders agreed, that our foundational principles retain their crucial relevance in this turbulent era. After all, employers who hire UNIBusiness graduates still prize the three qualities we deliver:

• Cutting-edge business knowledge to confront the complex global economy.

• Exceptional professional skills to contribute immediately and confidently in the workplace.

• Strong work values to meet the highest organizational expectations.

THE PLAN
Yes, our fundamentals will endure, but new realities cannot be ignored. We must act decisively and swiftly:

• Changing learning habits require us to find new methods of student engagement while carefully retaining the best of the past. A comprehensive examination of our curriculum and delivery methods is currently under way. If you have any suggestions for how to engage today’s students, please drop me a line.

• Rising financial pressures demand alternative sources of funding. This long-term and ongoing pursuit is becoming more critical by the day. One of our strategies is to keep expanding a reliable pipeline of tuition-paying international students. To that end, we are exploring 2+2 arrangements with universities around the globe. International students will complete their first two years at their home schools and seamlessly transfer to UNI for their last two years. Our most advanced partnership brought 29 students from Shanghai Dianji University (SDJU) in August to study at UNI for the next two years, raising the total number of SDJU students currently enrolled here to 45.

• Shifting public preferences challenge us to show prospective students and their parents that our commitment to quality and rigor perfectly aligns with their preference for value and employability. Our first-ever student recruiting campaign, featured on page 12, is one example of our strategic response.

I am grateful to the students, faculty, staff and Executive Advisory Board members who helped us formulate our new strategic plan.

I ask for your continued support and would also appreciate your innovative ideas on how we can respond to this shifting landscape in the context of time-tested fundamentals.

The Executive Advisory Board has been the driving force behind our increasingly strategic orientation and provided a much-needed external perspective during the recent planning process. In addition, board members Ted Breidenbach, Scott Hauser (Accounting ’84, MBA ’93) and Cynthia Goro represented the board and provided guidance during the College’s internal deliberations.

Randy Pilkington, executive director of UNI Business and Community Services, expertly facilitated all the strategic planning meetings during the lengthy process.

UNIBusiness thanks everyone who gave their time and feedback to help shape our strategic plan.
UNIBusiness is accredited by AACSB International, the leading accrediting body for business schools. It’s a distinction earned by less than 5 percent of business schools worldwide, so we cherish the challenge to live up to the AACSB’s ever-rising expectations.

In 2013, AACSB recast its accreditation standards, placing greater emphasis on engagement, innovation and impact as the driving themes behind the best business schools in the world. We enthusiastically welcome this development.

“We were proud to have passed with flying colors under the 2003 standards and are pleased to see that AACSB has evolved to place even greater emphasis on engagement, innovation and impact in the 2013 standards,” said UNIBusiness Associate Dean Leslie Wilson.

“These themes have been integral to our own approach to business education. When the AACSB accreditation team visits next academic year, we will be ready to showcase evidence for each theme.”

In the following pages we look at ways engagement, innovation and impact define UNIBusiness.

ENGAGEMENT  Interactions among students and alumni in our Real Estate program show a cycle of engagement that strengthens with each passing year.

INNOVATION  Advance Iowa’s work with Sterzing’s Potato Chips shows how an innovative arm of the College enables an Iowa company to serve loyal customers in a new market.

IMPACT  And Yolanda Pushetonequa shows that the education she received at UNI is making a profound impact on the financial standing of her tribal community members.

Students receive, and then they give, and it goes on and on.

As undergraduate students in the state’s only four-year real estate program, University of Northern Iowa real estate students form close bonds with the alumni, who are committed to the success of the program and its students.

Although they make up only about 3 percent of UNI Business graduates, the real estate alumni have a strong presence in Curris Business Building and tight ties to their undergraduate program. They visit campus to educate and recruit students and to discuss their personal career paths in order to help students build visions for their own futures. The Real Estate Program Advisory Board members meet regularly to advise faculty on issues facing real estate students and the real estate industry. Their input influences curriculum, faculty and student recruitment, research and resource allocation.

The engagement extends beyond campus when alumni host students at their places of employment. Overland Park, Kan., is a hotbed of alumni working in commercial real estate. According to Art Cox, director of the Center for Real Estate Education, UNI Business alumni hold over 65 industry positions within one square mile of that city. Many are at the prestigious firms Cohen Financial, Midland Loan Services (PNC Real Estate) and KeyBank, where the company boardroom is now named “The UNI Boardroom” to recognize the UNI Business alumni’s strong commitment to the local United Way. This fall, alumni at these companies hosted 15 UNI Business students so they could meet potential employers and network with real estate professionals in the area.

Much of this engagement happens through Rho Epsilon, a national real estate organization dedicated to helping students interact with professionals and gain knowledge in the real estate industry. The UNI chapter’s regular meetings feature returning alumni, career discussions and informal networking. Rho Epsilon also brings alumni back en masse for the annual Rho Epsilon Golf Outing. More than 50 real estate alumni from across the country are strategically paired with students based on career interests and skills needed in the alumni’s companies. These events have launched careers and the engagement begins to circle around when the alumni return to pay it back.
Alumni and student stories show the cycle of engagement in motion.

From Intern to Recruiter

Morgan Westpfahl (Finance and Real Estate ’07) is manager of consulting services at Real Estate Research Corporation (RERC). Her relationship with RERC began when she was a student and landed an analyst internship with the company. At that time RERC President Ken Riggs was an adjunct professor at UNI.

At RERC, Westpfahl performs appraisal management and consulting services for several pension funds and insurance companies involving commercial real estate. She manages the quarterly report process for the RERC Real Estate Report and is responsible for recruiting and hiring.

Westpfahl credits UNI engagement opportunities for helping her meet potential employers, receive internships and discover what she specifically wanted to do after graduation. Now, as an RERC employee, Westpfahl sits on the other side of the table, recruiting at UNI career fairs, speaking at Rho Epsilon meetings and participating in the annual golf outing.

From Student to Advocate

Jared G. Cuddeback (Finance and Real Estate ’99) is the director of valuation management services at RERC.

Cuddeback has given back in a unique way to the university that launched his career: he helped the UNI Real Estate program become only the third program in the U.S. to receive approval for the majority of credit toward the Real Property Appraiser Qualification Criteria for licensing by the Appraiser Qualifications Board of The Appraisal Foundation.

“As an alumnus of the UNI Real Estate program and having gone through the Appraisal Institute’s educational program after graduation, I knew there was a significant amount of overlap of the content being taught by the institute,” Cuddeback said.

The path to designation in the Appraisal Institute requires substantial investment of time and money, and expensive travel is required, according to Cuddeback, who lobbied the institute to waive “Level I” courses for UNI grads that had already covered the material in their undergraduate years.

The benefit to both UNI Real Estate Finance graduates and employers is a substantial savings in time and money.

“It comes out to about 26 days of class and roughly $14,000 saved per employee,” Cuddeback said. “Factoring in the lost productivity due to classroom hours, the savings to the employer increases exponentially.”
From Employer to Advisor

Tom Nordstrom (Education ’69) is retired from Aegon, but he stays connected to his alma mater through UNI’s Real Estate Advisory Council, a group of 20 executives who mentor, advocate for, fundraise for and advise UNI’s real estate program. Throughout his Aegon career, Nordstrom kept ties with UNI.

“In 1992 we started a real estate internship program with UNI. We had two students, Steve Neighbors (Finance and Real Estate ’92) and Ben Miller (Finance ’93),” said Nordstrom. “We hired them both. Steve was an Alumnus in Residence in 2008, and Ben now serves on the Finance Advisory Council, so it’s come full circle.”

Nordstrom credits UNIBusiness for continuing the student-alumni cycle of engagement.

“As the current director for Real Estate Education, one of Art Cox’s strengths is interfacing UNI grads with companies,” said Nordstrom, who stays involved with the intern selection process at Aegon in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. “After a campus visit in October, we invited six UNI students to Cedar Rapids for interviews. All six were selected for working internships. UNI’s representation at Aegon is excellent.”

THE NEXT GENERATION: Continuing the Cycle of Engagement

Gabriel Tovar (Finance and Real Estate) has held internships at Principal Financial Group, CBRE Hubbell Commercial and at RERC, which have given him multiple career path perspectives in advance of making any full-time commitments. He also was on the winning team for the NAIOP University Challenge in Minneapolis in April 2013.

Tovar’s dream job is to be a top producer for a commercial brokerage firm, and he hopes to stay involved with his alma mater, because “whether they are taking us out for pizza, providing contacts for the NAIOP Challenge or acting as mentors, UNI alumni are committed to helping those who come after them.” And Tovar wants to be part of that tradition.

Tanner Westberg (Finance and Real Estate) is impressed with what Rho Epsilon has done for him and hopes to stay involved beyond graduation.

“Through the weekly meetings, I have been able to make connections with many real estate alumni.” As a direct result, he landed an internship with the city of Urbandale in its Economic Development Department for the summer of 2013.

Alumni can also benefit from being engaged, as UNIBusiness students are highly sought after by recruiters for positions at top companies.

“Establishing relationships with students makes it more likely that students will consider their company when they graduate,” explained Westberg. “We take great pride that there are consistently more companies that want to speak at our Rho Epsilon meetings than we have time for.”
Sterzing’s Potato Chips was Afraid of Going Stale.

The decades-old family business, based in Burlington, Iowa, manufactures and distributes potato chips. The yellow bag and old-fashioned red logo bring about a nostalgic feeling for many Iowans.

While the company prides itself on making the chips the same way as was done when it was founded in the 1930s, Sterzing’s co-owners Craig Smith and Gary Schmeiser sought growth and innovation to keep the company from falling behind its competition.

The Greater Burlington Economic Development Organization introduced Smith and Schmeiser to Advance Iowa, a program of UNI’s Business and Community Services (BCS), the outreach arm of UNIBusiness. Advance Iowa is an innovative economic gardening service that works directly with second-stage businesses. The service was launched in the summer of 2013 to complement the work other BCS programs do for start-up, stage-one businesses.

“Second stage is a critical time because entrepreneurs face an entirely new set of challenges than they did as startups,” said Dan Beenken, program manager for Advance Iowa. “A lot of support is available for the stage-one entrepreneur, but there is a void when businesses are ready to move to the next stage. What made them successful early on won’t necessarily drive future growth.”

“We have people who can help identify prospects, look at competitive arenas, show companies how to take advantage of e-commerce and find new market places for new products,” Beenken continued. “We help them discover their unique points of influence.”

Advance Iowa put Sterzing’s on a path to penetrate a new market by using social media and leveraging its loyal customer base online. The Advance Iowa team helped Sterzing’s create innovative, engaging posts on Facebook and introduced them to online retailers like Amazon.com that competitors were using.

“Results to date are anecdotal,” Beenken said, “but their focus online has really been enhanced, and they are launching a new website with our help on SEO [search engine optimization] tactics.”

“Gary [Schmeiser] and I worked for the company for 25 and 30 years before we bought it. We understand ours is a mature company at 80 years old,” Smith said. “We were looking for some new ideas, something fresh, new eyes to give us an opportunity to explore some avenues we wouldn’t have explored on our own.

“The beauty of Advance Iowa is that I was able to bring my family to UNI so that we could further discuss Sterzing’s online presence. The team understood our family enterprise and even included my teenage daughter in the social media discussion. We came to understand the passion for what they do here.”

WORKING WITH ADVANCE IOWA

“Traditional economic development programs typically don’t have much to offer small, locally owned businesses,” said Jason Hutcheson (Finance and Real Estate ’04), president and CEO of Greater Burlington Partnership. “Even with a solid management team in place, companies must always challenge their way of thinking and creatively innovate—either through new products or new processes.” Hutcheson believes a partnership between education and business is exactly what is needed in the new economy. “UNI’s numerous resources are an excellent complement to the local economic development team.”

Advance Iowa focuses on strategic planning for second-stage entrepreneurial firms. It offers:

• Market Research/Competitive Intelligence
• Internet and Social Media Strategy/Search Engine Optimization
• Geographical Information Systems
• Core Strategy Review

HOW YOUR BUSINESS CAN INNOVATE WITH ADVANCE IOWA

1. Be a second-stage business of 10-99 employees with revenue approaching $1 million or more.
2. Work with a local Economic Development Organization in the Advance Iowa network.
3. Show Advance Iowa you are ready to explore innovative strategies.

IMPACT

Never Underestimate the Power of One.

“My pursuit of a finance degree at UNI was born of the desire to help protect our tribe’s economic resources, and my current path toward studying language is motivated by the instinct to protect our cultural legacies,” said Yolanda Pushetonequa (Finance ’01), a member of the Meskwaki Tribe in Tama, Iowa.

After graduation, Pushetonequa spent a year working in the tribe’s fiscal department and eight weeks researching language preservation. Then she took off for Chicago, spending four years in banking before returning to Tama in 2006 to care for her mother. With this transition she also found an opportunity to make a profound impact on her tribe.

“For most of my childhood I longed for the big city life, however there is nothing that can replace the satisfaction you get from working for the ones you care the most about,” she said. She has had a direct impact on the youth of the Meskwaki Tribe through her involvement with the Financial

The Meskwaki used shell beads, called wampum, on clothing and for necklaces, but wampum was also used as money.

- 2001: Earns B.A. degree in Finance from UNI.
- 2001: Works as Realty Officer in Meskwaki Tribe Payroll Office.
- 2006: Moves back to Tama and begins volunteer work with Meskwaki Financial Literacy Committee.
- 2011: Receives Tama County Economic Development Commission grant to help community members maximize long-term financial health of trust fund investments.
- 2011: Is appointed to Meskwaki, Inc. board.
- 2012: Meskwaki Financial Literacy Class wins national award from Native American Finance Officers Association.
- 2013: Partners with UNI to establish a language symposium at Meskwaki Convention Center.
- 2013: Speaks at the Center for Indigenous Peoples in Taiwan.
- 2013: Begins master’s program in Linguistics at University of Minnesota.

Literacy Committee and the tribe’s Language Department. She also had an impact as a board member of the tribe’s business holding company Meskwaki, Inc.

“It was exactly the type of assistance I wanted to do. I have always wanted to help people understand their money matters to better their daily family lives,” Pushetonequa said.

Pushetonequa has helped raise community members’ consciousness about their financial decisions and helped them realize the implications of those decisions.

“We’ve seen changes in the decisions our youth make when they finish school, turn 18 and have access to their trust funds,” she said. “They are gradually making more responsible choices like buying homes, tax sheltering with gradual withdrawals and purchasing more economical automobiles.”

And Pushetonequa notes that the Financial Literacy Committee has also influenced tribal government to change its Minors’ Trust Fund Distribution Plan. This year the Tribal Council adopted changes that will safeguard the minor trust funds to keep them stable over a long period of time.

“This change will allow the majority of their money to last well into adulthood, which was one of our ultimate goals,” Pushetonequa said.

Complementing her success in financial education, Pushetonequa has also had a significant impact on her tribe’s language preservation. She became founding director of the Language Department and collaborated with UNI Associate Provost for International Programs Craig Klafter to organize the Meskwaki Language Symposium in February 2013.

In the summer of 2013, Pushetonequa traveled to the Center for Aboriginal Studies at National Chengchi University in Taiwan, joined the Council for Indigenous Peoples to discuss language issues of Iowa’s Native Americans and Taiwan’s indigenous people, and presented a televised lecture on “Best Practices in North American Indigenous Language Revitalization”. She is now working toward a master’s degree in Linguistics at the University of Minnesota with a long-term goal of earning a related Ph.D.

We’ve seen changes in the financial decisions our youth make. The decisions they make are gradually turning into more responsible choices like buying homes, tax sheltering with gradual withdrawals and purchasing more economical automobiles.

Pushetonequa hopes to contribute to language description, which can facilitate the creation of teaching materials and learner resources.

“My current path toward studying language is motivated by the instinct to strengthen and protect our cultural legacies.” Pushetonequa believes education for tribal members helps keep the Meskwaki community whole, intact and best equipped for not just surviving—but thriving—spiritually, socially and economically.

“I have so many goals for leaving behind a legacy of language work for current and future generations of Meskwaki people,” she said. “I am not sure I’ll accomplish everything that is needed, but I absolutely plan to do as much as I can.”
A New Enrollment Marketing Campaign for UNI Business

Get Ready for Business

The competition for college students is intensifying, and high school students – and their parents – are increasingly focused on the professional career outcomes of their college education. To increase their awareness of our intense dedication to professional readiness, UNI Business launched an enrollment marketing campaign this fall with the tagline “Get Ready for Business.”

While professional readiness has always been a core focus of the College, until now it has never been promoted statewide on its own as a key differentiator, according to marketing instructor Matthew Wilson, who is also the creative director for the campaign. To create a memorable and relevant message, the marketing and communications team focused on a target audience of Iowa high school students who aspire to achieve professional success but need guidance in their preparation.

“These students need to feel confident that UNI is a place they can get the business knowledge and professional skills they need to compete in the job market,” Matthew Wilson said.

“Preparing our students for their professional careers is our number one priority.”

After months of development, the campaign launched with three TV spots running in major Iowa metropolitan areas through March and ads on social media and digital radio. The spots feature current students, faculty members and alumni Amela Andelija (Marketing ’13), Dalton Boettcher (Accounting ’12, MAcc ’13), Terese Kuster (Communications ’12), Tim Marlow (Accounting ’11) and Cody Miller (Marketing ’11).

Matthew Wilson wanted to make students and young alumni the stars of the ads by allowing them to tell their own stories showcasing our outstanding Accounting program, one-of-a-kind Professional Readiness Program and the successful businesses launched from the R.J. McElroy Student Business Incubator.

Matthew Wilson explained, “Our creative approach was to focus on recent alumni who experienced immediate career success based on their studies at UNI, along with the faculty and staff who played a huge role in their education in and out of the classroom.”

Future videos are planned that will showcase other UNI Business programs. Over time, a complete portrait will emerge of the many reasons why UNI Business is the place for students who want to be “ready for business.”

LEADING THE CHARGE

Instructor of marketing Matthew Wilson brought invaluable higher education marketing experience to UNIBusiness when he joined the faculty in 2011. He teaches digital advertising and marketing, bringing more than 15 years of professional experience in interactive advertising, experiential marketing and interactive product development to the classroom.
UNIBusiness celebrates excellence in student competitions, program milestones, and faculty and staff accomplishments throughout the year, and there is much to celebrate. The following is a small sample from the hundreds of success stories posted at business.uni.edu each year.

UNI (B.A.+MAcc) = 100% CPA success

In 2013, the UNI accounting students who completed their undergraduate and master’s degrees at UNI passed all four sections of the CPA exam on their first attempt and within 30 days of completing their degrees. “This represents the purest possible form of a 100-percent pass rate,” said UNIBusiness Dean Farzad Moussavi. “We are in awe as our accounting students outdo themselves and their peers at other schools year after year.”

Schrage Wins Educator of the Year Award at National Conference

Instructor of marketing Chris Schrage (Marketing ‘96, MBA ’97) was rewarded for her work on the Operation Stimulus Conference’s case competition and continued efforts in trade education development with the 2013 Educator of the Year Award. Schrage is one of many of our faculty members nationally recognized for their dedication to their field of study and the students they teach.

UNI Entrepreneurs in Top Three at National Startup Business Challenge

In its first College Entrepreneurs Organization (CEO) Startup Simulation Competition, UNI Entrepreneurs placed third in the nation. The team of Jenna Abel (Marketing), Mitchell Phillips (Finance) and Trevor Carlson (Psychology) finished with about 95 percent of the total possible points.

UNIBusiness Students Mean Business On and Off the Court

Erin Dohnaleck (Management), Sharnae Lamar (Economics and Finance) and Jessica McDowell (Marketing and Graphic Communications) are members of the UNI women’s basketball team, which was named to the Women’s Basketball Coaches Association (WBCA) 2013 Academic Top 25 Team Honor Roll. The team finished the 2012-2013 academic year with the seventh best GPA among NCAA Division I teams.

Panther men’s basketball players Austin Pehl (Marketing and Graphic Design) and Chip Rank (Economics) were named to the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) Honors Court, which recognizes collegiate basketball student-athletes who excelled in academics during the 2012-13 season.

UNIBusiness Student’s Essay Earns National Recognition

A way with words earned Luke Neuhaus (Accounting and Economics) a $1,250 scholarship to represent the UNI Supply Chain Management Association at the 2013 Institute of Supply Management (ISM) meeting in Dallas. He submitted an essay to compete for this opportunity and was recognized at the conference with the other nine winners.

Student Organizations Team Up to Raise Money for Local, Global Good

UNIBusiness student organizations do many fundraisers and outreach activities for nonprofits and social causes throughout the year. But during February and March of 2013, the organizations teamed up to make positive changes globally and locally, combining the virtues of sustainability, service and global awareness. Funds from the students’ efforts went to the following causes:

- Planting trees at a public golf course in Parkersburg, Iowa, which was damaged by the devastating tornado that swept through the town in 2008.
- Water purification projects and education in Siares, Matagalpa, Nicaragua, a destination UNIBusiness students have served regularly since 2001.
- The emergency operations of International Medical Corps, a $185-million global, humanitarian nonprofit organization that provides healthcare training and relief and development programs in the most devastated regions of the world. International Medical Corps is led by alumna Nancy Aossey (Marketing ’82, MBA ’84).
IWRC Launches Online Food Waste Reduction Resource

The Iowa Waste Reduction Center (IWRC) added a new online resource to its arsenal with the launch of the Iowa Food Waste Reduction Project. This initiative is part of an effort to help businesses, organizations and individuals reduce food waste and divert it from the landfills. A Solid Waste Alternative Program grant from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources supported the project.

UNIBusiness Student Elected to Iowa Recycling Association Board

UNIBusiness student and entrepreneur Brian Hoyer (Management) was elected to the board of directors of the Iowa Recycling Association, a non-profit serving the recycling industry. Hoyer is the owner of Rite Environmental, which is the parent for several companies including Recycle Rite. Recycle Rite offers single-stream, curb-side recycling in Cedar Falls, Iowa, and plans to expand its services to other communities. Rite Environmental’s headquarters is located in the John Pappajohn Entrepreneurial Center’s R. J. McElroy Student Business Incubator at UNI.

UNIBusiness is dedicated to preparing students for professional credentials and licensure to give graduates an additional edge in the job market. UNIBusiness developed three new professional certification training opportunities over the last year.

SIX SIGMA GREEN BELT
UNIBusiness students can earn Six Sigma Green Belt certification through a class that prepares them with coursework, international travel, company visits and the option of an overseas internship. The goals of the Six Sigma program are to reduce process variation, improve quality, eliminate waste, improve speed/efficiency and save time, which result in financial savings and improved process performance for a company.

CERTIFIED ASSOCIATE IN PROJECT MANAGEMENT
UNIBusiness students can prepare for the Certified Associate in Project Management exam through courses connected with the Organizational Leadership emphasis for management majors. The examination tests knowledge of the terminology, concepts and processes discussed in The Guide to the Project Management Body of Knowledge publication.

CERTIFIED PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
UNIBusiness students completing the Real Estate program are approved to have satisfied all but one of the courses required for the Certified Property Management designation from the Institute of Real Estate Management. This designation allows recent graduates to establish themselves early in their real estate careers.

UNIBUSINESS STUDENTS CAN ALSO:

• Earn 90 percent of the credits needed to satisfy Certified General Appraiser licensing.
• Prepare for and take the Certified Global Business Professional examination.
• Take extensive preparatory classes for the Certified Public Accountant (CPA) Exam.
• Take review classes for the Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA®) Level I Exam.
• Earn state secondary teaching licensure qualifying them to teach up to three areas of business in high schools.

“What is especially gratifying in developing these opportunities is that our students are willing to put in the extra time and effort that is required to take advantage of the opportunity. Their subsequent success passing certification exams leaves no doubt that we’re doing the right thing,” said UNIBusiness Dean Farzad Moussavi.

This year we focus on our partnership with Shanghai Dianji University.

More than 90 percent of UNIBusiness students are from Iowa and come to us with little international exposure. Yet we aim to graduate globally well-versed professionals who can immediately contribute to and thrive in today’s business environment. Five years ago only one in 20 UNIBusiness students had international experience; today, it’s one in five. We aim to keep that rate growing until every student graduates with a substantial international experience.

UNI-SDJU 2+2 Program Thrives

The relationship between UNI and Shanghai Dianji University (SDJU) dates back to the formation of a 2+2 program in 2006. Under that agreement, SDJU business students study for two years on the Dianji campus and then transfer to UNI for their final two years. Upon completion of their UNI courses, the Dianji students earn degrees from both institutions.

The number of students participating in this program grows each year. In the fall of 2013, 45 SDJU students were studying at UNI, up from 18 in 2012.

SDJU BUSINESS STUDENTS STUDY FOR TWO YEARS ON THE DIANJI CAMPUS AND THEN TRANSFER TO UNI FOR THEIR FINAL TWO YEARS.

The most notable feature of this partnership is SDJU’s four-year international trade program that has been developed in cooperation with UNIBusiness. When it is fully in place the program will be delivered entirely in English, giving SDJU students a solid foundation for their UNI studies. It will also include opportunities for UNIBusiness faculty to teach at SDJU, adding yet another international business hub to our faculty’s global experience opportunities. This spring, seven UNI faculty will teach in Shanghai.

Student Leader Exchange

Nine members of the UNIBusiness Presidents’ Council seized the opportunity to take part in the new Student Leader Exchange to Shanghai and Hong Kong in May 2013. The students expanded their international business and cultural education as they interacted with peers from Shanghai Dianji University (SDJU), made formal presentations at a leadership forum at SDJU and visited business and cultural centers in each city.

“It was impressive to see up close how Hong Kong operates as an economic liaison between the U.S. and China.”

- Olivia Cezar
  (Management and Marketing)

While in Shanghai, the students had the opportunity to hear from UNI MBA Hong Kong alumnus Peter Liew (MBA ’04), a leader in China’s luxury hotel industry, about doing business in Asia. In Hong Kong, the students met with the principal assistant secretary for commerce and economic development and the president of Principal International Group Asia.

Rex Auyeung, president of Principal International (Asia) based in Hong Kong and senior vice president of the Principal Financial Group, told the students to be proud of their Midwestern roots, as it’s traditional values, such as humility and respect, rooted in Principal’s home base of Des Moines, Iowa, that enable the company to thrive in Asia where overly aggressive business strategies from the east and west coasts defy the local culture.

Creating opportunities for overseas experience is another way UNIBusiness helps students prepare for their professional careers.
At UNIBusiness we want our students to learn a very practical lesson firsthand: just as wise investors diversify their financial portfolios, it would be wise for them to diversify their social networks.

Second Annual Diversity Case Competition

The 2013 Diversity Case Competition challenged students to develop practical solutions for administrators, faculty and students who aim to enhance diversity at UNI.

With one intensive week to prepare, six teams presented their recommendations to a panel of judges who represented campus and local companies. Scores were based on clarity, feasibility and creativity, as well as the teams’ responses to judges’ questions.

“Congratulations to this year’s winners:

FIRST PLACE ($2,000)
Philip Musson (Management and Spanish ‘13), Ethan Thompson (Marketing ‘13), Brendon Brauer (Accounting ‘13) and Christopher Houlihan (Marketing ‘13)

SECOND PLACE ($1,500)
Mitchell Holmes (Finance), Julie Svendsen (Management) and Kelvin Robinson (Management)

Four teams received Honorable Mentions ($500 each)

UNIBusiness thanks PwC and Veridian Credit Union for sponsoring the Diversity Case Competition.

Teaching Cultural Competency

UNIBusiness invites experts to present workshops on various teaching challenges that today’s faculty face in the classroom. This fall faculty learned how to raise cultural competency in the classroom.

Cultural competency is crucial to an organization’s success, according to James Bonilla, associate professor of conflict studies in the School of Business at Hamline University, who presented to UNIBusiness faculty in February 2013.

Bonilla discussed five approaches to cultural competency for faculty to consider when they are teaching. He also discussed five specific classroom strategies to enhance cultural competency on the faculty member’s part, which in turn should lead to a more inclusive classroom environment.

“Faculty were receptive to considering the different cultural lenses that we all bring into the classroom, and the impact the various lenses might have on students from different cultural groups,” said Mary Connerley, head of the Department of Management and UNIBusiness’ Diversity Task Force Chair. “Diversity impacts both teaching and learning in the classroom, so we intend to continue supporting faculty and students in their development by bringing in more diversity-related speakers like Bonilla.”
UNIBusiness Annual Giving

UNIBusiness recognizes alumni and friends who made financial gifts to the College during the 2013 fiscal year, which runs July 1, 2012 - June 30, 2013. Your support is greatly appreciated.

A Note on Fundraising for UNIBusiness

Thank you, UNIBusiness graduates and friends, for your generous and loyal support; you have made a real impact at our alma mater! In May we celebrated the success of the “Imagine the Impact” campaign, surpassing our $150 million goal by nearly $8 million and an entire year early! Your charitable contributions for students, programs and faculty resulted in the largest fundraising effort in the history of this great university.

UNIBusiness students, programs and faculty will benefit directly from more than $18 million raised during the “Imagine the Impact” campaign. More than $7.2 million was designated for scholarships, and $10.8 million for program and faculty support. About half of the campaign results are future gifts commitments through estate plans and bequests.

The campaign celebration was wonderful, but we quickly get back to work. The changing landscape in state support and the national concern over growing student debt challenges us to keep experiential opportunities – a hallmark of a UNIBusiness education – affordable and accessible to our students.

Your gifts to the Dean’s Fund for Excellence, scholarships and specific department programs help remove the financial barriers that might prevent a student from studying abroad, accepting an unpaid internship, attending a national conference or competition, or pursuing a professional certification.

You recognize these learning experiences provide a professional edge for our students at graduation. We appreciate your willingness to help.

We also extend a heartfelt thanks to all of you who willingly give your time and talents in so many ways:
- advocating on behalf of UNI at the Iowa Capitol;
- referring prospective students to our admissions office;
- assisting with our Professional Readiness Program;
- hosting student groups to visit your employer;
- and arranging internships or staffing a booth at the UNI Career Fair.

Not to mention all the volunteer time dozens of individuals devote to various advisory boards at UNI.

We are confident that, once again, UNIBusiness alumni and friends will partner with us to meet the challenges ahead. Please consider what you can do to ensure the success of our students, and contact me to discuss at 800-782-9522, 319-273-4444 or michelle.rourke@uni.edu.

With Purple Pride,

The Steve Corbin Endowed Marketing Fellowship

by David Morton
(Marketing ’82)
President, Marketing Services
J.W.Morton & Associates

I met Steve Corbin heading into my senior year at UNI, the summer of ’81. Consumer Behavior, taught by “Corb” as we came to know him. Every day for two hours. Two chapters a day. For four weeks. It was crazy, and I can’t tell you how pivotal that class was. Something clicked during that summer session, and the rest of my education was never the same. It was the start of a great year of learning and professional development, and a lifelong career in marketing.

So much of that experience was about the teaching. Steve Corbin is a gifted teacher. His abilities and style made all the difference in my career at UNI.

Perhaps you’ve had a similar experience. Good professors make a difference in many students’ lives every day. But good professors are hard to find.

Steve knows this all too well. In recent years he often talked about the importance of supporting our faculty. How fitting then, when he retired in May 2013 after 38 years of service to UNI students, that an endowed marketing fellowship in his name would be established.

WHAT IS AN ENDOWED FELLOWSHIP?

• It is a privately funded endowment (the principal is untouched, earnings are spendable) to annually fund faculty activity such as professional development, research, or summer experiences that allow faculty to bring current practices back to the classroom.

• One faculty member is selected to hold the prestigious title, based on set criteria and for a designated time period.

I have found endowed fellowships are quite common — almost expected — among top business schools. In fact other departments at UNI have established funds, but this would be the first for the Department of Marketing. And it’s critical as we seek to fill the teaching void left by Steve’s retirement. There is a shortage of — and great demand for — the best Ph.D.’s in business, and an alumni-funded fellowship makes a statement about the confidence we have in the College of Business Administration.

The goal for the Steve Corbin Endowed Marketing Fellowship is $100,000 through combined gifts, pledges and company matching gifts, payable over five years. We are well on our way. My business pledged immediately, as did many fellow UNI alumni and peers. You might recognize some of the individuals and organizations:

LINDQUIST NAMED NEW PWC PROFESSOR OF ACCOUNTING

Tim Lindquist was named the PricewaterhouseCoopers Professor of Accounting in fall 2013. His strong commitment to students begins in the classroom where he is known as a “tough” teacher yet still pulls in some of the College’s highest student ratings. Lindquist also serves as faculty advisor for the UNI Accounting Club and is sought out by students for guidance. He has received numerous awards for his service to students, the university, the College and the profession.

Lindquist received his B.S. in accounting from Northern Michigan University, an MBA from Michigan State University and his Ph.D. from the University of Colorado. He has served on the faculty at UNI for the last 23 years. The PwC Professorship was established by UNI alumni who became partners in the firm. The establishing partners are Steve Anderson, Jeff Bjostream, Mike Brandmeyer, Jill Hemphill (now at General Electric), Peter Schlicksup, Dave Schroeder, Tim Throndson, Ellen Valde and Ken Wise.

UNIBusiness thanks the alumni at PwC for their generous support of outstanding faculty.
Faculty Recognition

Delivering an engaging business education in a vibrant, supportive environment requires outstanding faculty willing to demand the best of themselves and of their students. UNIBusiness congratulates the following faculty members for their outstanding contributions to their students’ education and their academic disciplines.

Bryce Kanago, associate professor of economics

FACULTY SERVICE AWARD
Sponsored by David (Management ’81) and Cindy (Elementary Education ’80) Petratis

Dennis Schmidt, Deloitte Faculty Fellow and professor of accounting

FACULTY TEACHING AWARD
Sponsored by Tim Williams (Accounting ’71) in memory and honor of LaVerne Andreessen

Jeff Stokes, associate professor of finance

FACULTY RESEARCH AWARD
Sponsored by Gaylen (Accounting ’72) and Glenna Miller

Matt Bunker, associate professor of marketing

SPECIAL RECOGNITION
Sponsored by HNI Corporation

UNIBusiness thanks HNI Corporation; Gaylen and Glenna Miller; David and Cindy Petratis; and Tim Williams for their support of faculty recognition.

New Faculty

Demand for Ph.D.s in business far exceeds supply, and UNIBusiness is further limited by the fact that it wants those special Ph.D.s who have a passion for teaching and can transfer their practical experiences into an exciting classroom environment.

Cathalene Bowler
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF ACCOUNTING

Cathalene Bowler, who specializes in taxation, joined the accounting department after completing her Ph.D. this summer at Morgan State University. She also spent 11 years in the military and has B.S. and MAcc degrees from Florida State University.

Bowler’s current research focuses on the impact of accounting rules that require businesses to analyze and disclose income tax risks on earnings management, internal control weaknesses and audit quality. Prior to coming to UNI, Bowler taught accounting at Morgan State University and Towson University.
UNIBusiness Brings Prominence to Supply Chain Management Program with Two New Hires

Daniel (Dan) Bumblauskas
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF MANAGEMENT
Jeff and Julie Hamilton/ESP International Supply Chain and Logistics Management Fellow

Daniel Bumblauskas joined the management department as a new assistant professor of supply chain management and the first Jeff and Julie Hamilton/ESP International Supply Chain and Logistics Management Fellow. Bumblauskas spent the last three years at the University of Missouri where he taught operations and supply chain management. Bumblauskas has been an active consultant since 2003 and was part of the team that developed the sears.com website, which is still one of the top 10 e-commerce sites today.

Bumblauskas received his Ph.D. in industrial engineering from the department of Industrial and Manufacturing Systems Engineering at Iowa State University, where he also received B.S. and M.S. degrees in Industrial Engineering, and a master’s in general management from Harvard University.

The Jeff and Julie Hamilton/ESP International Supply Chain and Logistics Management Fellowship was established in 2013 through a generous gift from ESP International President and CEO Jeff Hamilton (Accounting ’80) and his wife Julie. The Hamilton Fellowship provides funding for professional development and practical research to reward outstanding junior faculty in Supply Chain Management, as well as support for student engagement activities and course enhancements.

John “Andy” Anderson
INSTRUCTOR OF MANAGEMENT
John Deere Endowed Faculty Fellow

John “Andy” Anderson is UNI’s first John Deere Endowed Faculty Fellow. He is in the final stages of his Ph.D. studies in International Business at Durham University (UK) and has extensive industry experience in new product development and global supply chain management. He studied Management Science at Lancaster University (UK), Supply Chain and Operations Management at UNI, and Mandarin Chinese at Northeast University of Finance and Economics (China).

Anderson has vast international experience and is fluent in Mandarin. He was the first UNIBusiness undergraduate student to do an international internship in Dalian, China. Anderson’s current research track explores Chinese outward foreign direct investment (FDI) establishment mode.

UNIBusiness thanks Jeff and Julie Hamilton for establishing this Supply Chain and Logistics Management Fellowship and the John Deere Foundation for establishing the John Deere Endowed Faculty Fellowship.
New Partnership Develops Students’ Soft-skills, Builds International Connections

Our Professional Readiness Program’s, new partnership with the founders of THE STUDNET is the latest example of how PRP is evolving to keep our students ahead of the game when it comes to career placement and employability. THE STUDNET is a web application that puts students and recruiters from around the world in one environment. Students use an online peer evaluation system to exchange feedback on projects, which develops communication skills and the ability to give and receive constructive critique on an international level. Recruiters provide workshops and can also access the students’ online portfolios, opening doors to employment opportunities around the world.

Hillyer Named New Professional Readiness Program Director

Katie Hillyer (Marketing ’09) was named the new Professional Readiness Program Director in May 2013. Hillyer was a student and president of the UNIBusiness Presidents’ Council when the College decided to pursue a professional skills development program. She also was involved with the program in her previous position as the College’s corporate and community relations coordinator.
THE STÜDNET: A New Portal to the World for UNIBusiness Students

Sebastien Chamarande and Sebastien Sayegh, co-founders of THE STÜDNET, explain why they chose to connect their European-based business to a Midwest university and how the THE STÜDNET web-based application is being implemented into UNIBusiness’ Professional Readiness Program.

We want to help academia make tomorrow’s leaders better men and women, so we created THE STÜDNET, an advanced platform for students to build online, real-time portfolios of professional and personal development that are open to peer and recruiter review.

At the AACSB International Annual Meeting in April 2013, we presented THE STÜDNET project to the accreditation body and its members. We were aiming to acquire four clients for our October launch. We came back home to Monaco, with 83 schools willing to enroll, one of which was the UNI College of Business Administration.

At the conference we met UNIBusiness Dean Farzad Moussavi who expressed interest in the internationalization opportunity THE STÜDNET provides. We were intrigued by him and this Midwestern institution. After reading the story of hope about the two Nancy’s*, everybody at our company was moved and speechless.

It seems an unlikely pairing at first glance, but we wanted UNIBusiness to be our inaugural partner. Our shared belief that when you are willing to go the extra mile, you might actually find a greater version of yourself strongly influenced that decision.

A lot of work took place over the summer, and on Oct. 1, 2013, we launched a pilot project in conjunction with the UNIBusiness Professional Readiness Program. The following process is in place for students who enrolled in THE STÜDNET to fulfill the third level of the Professional Readiness Program:

Step 1: Students interact online through THE STÜDNET web application and assess each other’s soft skills.

Step 2: Human resource professionals provide training and mentorship through workshops, helping students develop their soft skills. The cross-cultural context is a large part of students’ development, as local students are joined by foreign participants through video-conference systems.

Step 3: Every participant builds a soft skill profile and a documented résumé and may apply for international internships and job opportunities otherwise unavailable through traditional placement.

Additionally, we threw in a contest for UNIBusiness students: the most active student on the web application wins a four-day trip to Monaco, for two, in a five-star hotel. The winner will be announced at the UNI Spring Career Fair, as the first phase of the pilot concludes.

By the end of the second phase, once the program has become perfectly tuned for the needs of UNIBusiness students, it could be integrated into classes and eventually expand to the entire UNIBusiness student body.

In the meantime, we are very proud to feature UNIBusiness at the forefront of innovation within the prestigious AACSB community and beyond.

*UNIBusiness Dean Farzad Moussavi wrote about “the two Nancy’s” – Nancy Aossey (Marketing ’82, MBA ’84) and Nancy Umuhire (MIS ’08) – in the 2008-2009 edition of the UNIBusiness Alumni Magazine. Aossey was on campus to accept her honorary doctorate for her worldwide humanitarian work during the May 2008 commencement. She shared the stage with Umuhire, who was that year’s commencement speaker. But their connection ran deeper than that moment: In 1994, Umuhire fled the Rwandan city of Kigali to escape ethnic genocide, while Aossey and the organization she leads – International Medical Corps – worked from the city to provide relief for those who were unable to flee.
The University of Northern Iowa’s College of Business Administration celebrated past achievements and inspired future success during the Class of 2013 Graduation Celebration on April 11, 2013. The day’s events involved our Alumni in Residence, Executive Advisory Board members, faculty, staff, students and parents.

Throughout the day on April 11, the undergraduate Alumni in Residence visited classes and spoke to students in their respective departments.

Mark Walter
Management ’85

Independent management advisor
Santa Rosa Valley, Calif.

After years of holding senior management positions at top financial institutions, including COO of WMC Mortgage/GE Consumer Finance, Walter switched to independent contracting in 2007. He primarily works in the consumer credit industry leading start-up and turn-around initiatives, serves as the executive advisor to the principals of a start-up residential lending company and advises senior management teams. In addition to his degree from UNI, Walter has an MBA from Arizona State University.
Derek Thoms
Economics ’02

High yield trader, Aegon USA
Marion, Iowa

Thoms is the high yield trader within Aegon USA Investment Management where he primarily manages day-to-day trading of the high-yield bond portfolio. Previously, he was manager of inside sales at ESP International, leading project management and customer service efforts for the company, and was ESP International’s procurement manager in charge of its global inventory management. Before joining ESP International, he was the development director for UNIBusiness.

Jeff Bjustrom
Accounting ’88

Minneapolis tax market leader, PwC
Maple Grove, Minn.

Bjustrom, a licensed CPA, manages about 130 tax professionals, whose focus includes international, federal, state and local tax matters. He manages and coordinates large business structuring projects and works across PwC’s lines of services to improve tax efficiencies for clients. He has worked at PwC for 25 years, previously as national tax leader for the company’s Retail & Consumer Industry group. In addition to his degree from UNI, Bjustrom has a master’s of business taxation degree from the University of Minnesota.

Rochelle Dotzenrod
Finance and Real Estate ’04

Vice president, Wells Fargo
Plymouth, Minn.

Dotzenrod has spent her career in the banking industry, recently moving into Wells Fargo’s Community Lending and Investment Department, which provides lending for multi-family housing with construction and permanent loans, tax credit equity financing and bond financing. She previously worked at U.S. Bank and at Principal Global Investors where she began her career as an intern and was employed full-time after graduating from UNI.

John Hall
Marketing ’65

Founder, Goose Island Beer Company
Chicago

In 1988, Hall left Container Corporation of America and founded Goose Island Beer Company, opening a brewpub to introduce Chicago residents to traditional styles of ales and lagers. Over the years, Goose Island opened a brewery and bottling plant on Fulton Street and added a brewpub in Wrigleyville. In 2011, Anheuser-Busch InBev purchased the company with Hall maintaining ownership of the two brewpubs. In addition to his UNI degree, Hall has an MBA from the University of Iowa.

The Alumni in Residence within the College’s five undergraduate departments discussed “Experience Speaks: Life After Graduation” with a standing-room-only crowd during the Class of 2013 Forum, sponsored by Transamerica.
Iowa Lt. Gov. Kim Reynolds and retiring UNI President Benjamin Allen made an impromptu visit to the Class of 2013 Awards Ceremony, sponsored by United Fire Group.

She is executive vice president, chief administrative officer and chief financial officer for Life Care Services (LCS). Previously she was with DuPont Pioneer, rising to vice president and CFO before moving to LCS in 2006.

As a non-traditional undergraduate student at UNI, Lois O’Rourke (Accounting ’81, MBA ’88) balanced her school work with a part-time job and being a full-time mom. It took her six years to earn her accounting degree, but when she graduated in 1981 she had already earned her CPA credentials.

After graduation she started working full time at an insurance company in the investment area and began taking MBA courses. By 1988 she had earned an MBA degree and become a CFA.

“The MBA program has changed a lot since I was here in the 80s,” she told a group of current MBA students at the MBA Conference in June 2013. During the conference, teams of MBA candidates present the consulting work they’ve done for the final Capstone project. As the 2013 MBA Alumna in Residence, O’Rourke sat at the executive table, asked them questions about their projects and evaluated their presentations. “Working with real companies is so valuable,” she added.

O’Rourke, who was a founding principal of QuadCapital, retired in December 2012 with more than 30 years of investment experience. Her responsibilities at QuadCapital included loan origination and underwriting, product development, mortgage banking relationships, tax planning and financial management for the company. Prior to forming QuadCapital, O’Rourke was a vice president of a registered investment advisor responsible for managing approximately $6 billion in assets for two Midwestern-based life insurance companies.

‘Bridges of Madison County’ hits Broadway

“The Bridges of Madison County,” written by founding UNIBusiness Dean Robert Waller (Management ’62, M.A. ’64), has made its way to Broadway. Alumni from several states across the country gathered in New York City for a reception hosted by UNI President Bill Ruud prior to the opening Broadway performance on Feb. 20. Waller addressed the guests with a brief overview of the book’s 22-year history. In 1992, the book debuted on the New York Times bestseller list where it remained for 164 consecutive weeks, which puts it in the top-10 of the New York Times all-time bestsellers. Dozens of theatrical adaptations have been made around the world, and Clint Eastwood and Meryl Streep starred in a 1995 major motion picture of the same name.

You can learn more and view scenes from the musical at bridgesofmadisoncountymusical.com.

A Successful Student Does More Than Attend Class

When students want to study a topic in-depth, publish and present their research at national conferences and gain useful experience for graduate and law school admission, we want to help.

Your contributions to the Dean’s Fund for Excellence can fund a student’s attendance at professional conference, purchase airline tickets for international experiences, buy CFA seminar books, fund a scholarship and much more.

UNIBusiness students’ participation in the Undergraduate Research Program has helped them land jobs and gain admission to top graduate and law school programs.

“...in addition to the Undergraduate Research Program being personally rewarding, I believe it played a crucial role in my law school acceptances and offers,” said Andy Dykstra (Economics ‘13). “Although demanding, the Undergraduate Research Program was a great experience.”
